

COUPLE WALKED FROM CHICAGO TO BE DEPORTED

Prosperity Did Not Smile Upon Max Heinke and His Wife, Ernestine.

LOST MONEY AND BABY.

They Leave America Penniless After Almost Two Years of Sorrow.

Holding hands and with all their worldly belongings in a little hand basket on the floor near them, two emigrants sat in the Barge Office to-day, and told the sad story of their experiences of a year and a half in this country—experiences that have led them back to Ellis Island and deportation.

The man is Max Heinke, big and strong, and his wife, Ernestine, a frail little woman, twenty-six years old, just ten years younger than her husband. He was a butcher in Hainau, in Germany, and they had been sweethearts many, and prosperity didn't come his way with such persistence that he considered himself able to support a wife.

"So Ernestine say we wait," explained Max. "I save all I can and we come here, yes, and here the plenty money we will make, but each it isn't what we think it will be no."

They waited to be married in New York, and when they arrived in August, 1906, on the Carmania, the first thing they did was to seek an alderman who united them. Max had saved about $200, and hearing of the boundless opportunities in the West they traveled to Chicago, where their troubles began.

They went to a lodging-house in South Clark street, a tough neighborhood, and together walked the streets searching for work in a butcher shop for Max. One day they carelessly left the wallet containing their little capital in their room, and when they returned found that some enterprising fellow lodger had stolen it.

Nothing to Eat and No Work. "Himmel it was awful," said Max. "No money, Ernestine, she cry and there isn't nothing to eat, and no one will give me work, because the language I cannot speak."

Then Max got a job as a porter at $4 a week, and from that he drifted out to a farm just south of Chicago, where Ernestine cooked and Max tilled the ground, and together earned $20 a month. But this was not to their liking, so they started to walk back to New York, and notwithstanding a little Heinke was expected, they arrived in Pittsburgh, a distance of 494 miles, in twenty-one days.

"It is very hard," spoke up Ernestine. "The roads are rough, and the people are so unkind, and put the dogs on us in many places, and we had to sleep out on the ground many nights."

"And once I saw wood for five hours, just for one plate of soup for Ernestine," said Max.

Resumed Their Long Walk.

In Pittsburgh the wife went to a hospital and there became a mother. Max worked at odd jobs about the hospital, and after a few weeks they started their journey back to Germany. They arrived in this city in October and the husband went to work on a farm at Sardinia, N. J., where they stayed two months, but made so little money, and were so discouraged that they gave it up.

"It is no use," said Max. "I say to Ernestine: 'The people here do not want us, they do not like us, and we cannot live. Let us go back to the Fatherland.' And we see the German Consul, who advise us to go back to Hainau, and say, if I say I am a pauper they will send us back without making us pay. Donnerwetter, I am no pauper—I can work. I am strong but I say I will do this thing for Ernestine and the little one."

More Ill Fortune.

Ill fortune still was on their track, however. They found at Ellis Island that they could not return to Germany, but that the little Agnes, having been born in this country, could not go with them. So they stayed, and tried to make a living, and it was not long before the baby fell ill with scarlet fever and died in the Riverside Hospital.

After this some German-American friends sent them to a farm in Clifton, but there Max found he and Ernestine were expected to work for their food and lodging with no wages, and after a little while they decided to again seek deportation.

Yesterday they arrived in New York once more, having walked from Clifton, but, having no money, they could find no lodging for the night.

"At the Barge Office they fell into the kindly hands of John Leary, the watchman, who fixed them up a bunk for the night, and to-day they will be taken over to Ellis Island."

"It is not good for poor people here," says Max with a sigh. "It is not such a land of the free, yes."

MILLIONAIRE AND 29 OF HIS FAMILY SAIL FOR EUROPE

Senor Bolio Is From the City of Mexico—Genee and Burgstaller Also Off.

Taking a vacation in Europe means something to Senor Bolio, of the City of Mexico. He sailed to-day on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. of the North German Lloyd line, with his wife and twenty-eight children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. With thirty Bolios on the passenger list the Kaiser Wilhelm II. will be pretty much of a Bolio boat this trip. Senor Bolio and his wife and numerous progeny will remain abroad all summer and the prospect of the hotel bills he will have to pay does not bother him particularly, for he is many times a millionaire.

Another passenger was the charming Adelaida Genee, the girl who has danced her way into the hearts of New Yorkers at the New York Theatre. Genee is a lucky young woman. Not only has she made an artistic and financial success of her visit to the United States, but she has enjoyed every minute of it. She says that she cannot recall a single unpleasant incident, and is anxious to return in September for a visit to the principal cities of the country.

Kington Gould sailed on a flying trip to France. He will visit his mother and brothers and sisters for a week, and then return to study hard all summer and catch up with his studies at Columbia University. He expects to graduate next year.

Alois Burgstaller, the Wagnerian tenor, found it hard to tear himself away from a big party of Hoboken friends who accompanied him to the pier. He said he hopes to return to New York next season, but has not yet signed a contract.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."
